Huge Success of Church Concert

The Christmas entertainment entitled "Linda's First Christmas Concert," sponsored by the "Teen Age Girls" Auxiliary of St. Thomas' church under the direction of Mrs. L. M. Wade, was most successful. The young people are to be congratulated on the splendid performance of the entire cast.

To an audience of close to two-hundred, a group of girls from the north, daughter of a trapper who, though well in her teens, visited a town for the first time. Linda was delighted with the prospect of seeing her first Christmas concert with her new friends. With the aid of the Fairy Queen the entire audience was privileged to see the concert which proved so entertaining.

The concert proper was opened by the Girls who greeted the audience and then introduced each of the numbers in turn with a witty verse.

One of the most popular items was the Minuet. The girls taking part were most attractively dressed in old-fashioned, colorful dresses, and as the "statues" came to life to dance in the moonlight, Mrs. A. Gray told the story of the Rendez-vous in song. The climax of the program was the story of the Nativity, in four scenes, most attractively presented, which left the audience with the glow of the real meaning of Christmas warming their hearts.

The usual New Year's Day leaves will not be held by the Lieut.-Governor this year, owing to the fact that he has been sent away as a day of prayer for the Allied arms.

We learn that Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Walker from Ottawa are expected here to spend the New Year Day holiday with Mrs. Walker's parents Mr. and Mrs. Dick Mackay.

Among the uniformed visitors to relatives in town for the Christmas leave were Messrs H. Bruncker, G. Schlitt, Colin Hannah and S. Rudd.

THE PURPOSE OF PRICE CONTROL

The federal government appears to be absolutely sincere in its plan to control prices in Canada, but it is up against a tremendous under-lying. Our people are used to the ways of freedom and rebel against any restrictions. Business in this country has been transacted with comparatively little restriction. In regulated nations of Europe the governments could readily impose drastic restrictions and see that they were carried out. But not so in this free country.

In Canada business has been left in the hands of the people, and a complex system was built up under free competition which provided the distribution of goods and services on a fairly efficient basis. For the government to step in now and control the whole distribution of goods and services creates a tremendous under-lying.

Nevertheless, something must be done. War demands are consuming commodities and the services of men to such an extent that serious shortages are already being felt. As the conflict goes on, scarcity will become greater and prices will rise. Once the lid is off anything can happen. In the last war living costs rose to such a height that the average person with a moderate income found his purchasing power destroyed. Only too many families suffered want and hardship because of high prices. Then when the war ended and prices tumbled, a severe depression set in. Merchants suffered heavy losses by the decline in the prices of the goods on their shelves, factories were closed and unemployment was rife. Any move that will tend to offset a similar eventuality when this war ends is worth-while trying.

War is the great destroyer. The first and greatest sacrifice is in the lives of the military forces. Then comes the destruction of property and the wastage which is always associated with war. No one can escape a proper share of the burden of such wastage. The cost must be borne by all.

The federal government's present policy is based on keeping down prices so that in the first place the people will have their necessities supplied at a reasonable cost. In the second place, if prices are kept at reasonable levels, the cost of conducting the war will be far less than if inflation went into effect. If prices can be kept down there will not be the collapse which occurred after the last war.

Every single person has a respon-

OUR FOOD SUPPLY

Written Specially for C.W.N.A.
 Newspapers by John Atkin, Farmer-Journalist
 NO. 8—DOWN TO EARTH
 TALKS

The time-table of nature does not await the convenience of men at year. Food production must be planned in advance and carried through on time. Now, at the end of 1941, it is late to scramble a giant big enough and sound enough to provide the vital labor for food production in 1942.

Tens of thousands of farm workers, farm youth and farmers have deserted from the farms to the towns and to the factories in 1941. Far too many farms have been abandoned. Far too many occupied farms are being carried on by elderly people and children. A vast acreage of tillable land is left in grass because there is no labor to make it more productive.

Idle land cannot be put into full production in less than two years, and then only with ample capital, labor and equipment. The problem now is to get the almost production out of the best land by finding labor to utilize all the available equipment.

Where is labor available? A good deal of it could be drawn from the towns. Farm boys and boys from the towns are being trained as mechanics and operators in the mechanized forces. They are learning to repair and use motor-driven and motor-drawn equipment.

The garages and repair shops in towns situated in the best farming areas have offered their stock season. With further gasoline rationing the garages are due for radically reduced business. Their equipment is available for the repair of farm machinery.

When the war broke out Canadian farm equipment was generally in bad repair. Farmers had not been able to keep their machinery in shape or to replace it. Now, the demand for steel and machines for war purposes, makes it impossible to provide all of the new equipment farmers need. The obvious thing to do is to recondition all the machinery worn repairing. If the machines are repaired in the best districts first, they will be ready for use on good nearby land that will produce the most food per hour of work. The time to begin repairing is now.

The men in the mechanized forces can be given part of their training on tractors and motors. They can be taught the principles of mechanics while repairing farm equipment. They can be tutored in home, often their own. Along with local mechanics who are unfit for service, and handy-men from the farms, they can put much of the available farm equipment in condition for the spring work. When the equipment is in shape, the men from the forces can be given training in the operation of power equipment on the farms. They can be given leave as needed at the peaks of farm work in seeding and harvesting and to do the plowing in the fall.

With the help of men who are physically fit and mechanically skilled, the older farm men, women and children, who are now struggling with work beyond their strength, could care for the stock and poultry, milk cows do the gardening and keep the farms going.

Such a plan should be added to all. Even those who hold credit in which there is no Christmas feel the splendor of that cry, and those who have no formal creed at all, still know there is one of the 365 portions of the year which is essentially the Day of the Child.

It is the day when even the most unselfish adult, long since congealed and hardened by the years can hear in his heart the footsteps of the little ones. Today they are running about so eagerly all over the world patting to see what good gifts may have been received, ardent with a hope that only young hearts can feel.

On this day the austere scientist who has almost quit believing in the very laws of astronomy which recently seemed so sure and stable, but which now seem descending in a mist of relativity—this carefully professional skeptic becomes a child himself, and considers it hard indeed if he cannot believe in Santa Claus, bearded fairly godfather of the children.

On this day even those who have been the most careless feel like saying over reverently that beautiful prayer for wisdom in the roaring of children:

"Almighty God, heavenly Father, who has blessed us with the joy and care of children; Give us light and strength so to train them, that they may love whatsoever things are true and pure and lovely, and of good report."

For on this Day of the Child we all remember that the most precious gift we can bestow upon our children is a capacity for feeling just such tender and generous and helpful emotion as today stir in the breasts of all good men and women.

Back Out? So What!

other plans for the supply of farm labor. It is not original. It is the product of contacts with many people who are thinking hard about food for 1942—people in the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, in the government services, editors, and people on the farms and in the towns. It would require the co-operation of all governments, farm organizations, implement companies, garages and repair shops. It should be worked out and given effect by a board created for the purpose by the Dominion Government.

EDGERTON

We hope you all had a nice Christmas, and may we take this opportunity of wishing everyone all possible happiness in the New Year. Most of all, we hope that it will bring peace
to the world again.

The wonderful weather which presented for the two weeks until late Monday, brought large numbers to town and was ideal for holiday travelers. Not many seemed to leave their homes here, but with members of the various armed forces, students and others, there were many happy family reunions. Among the former group, we saw Dick Pawsey, Bill
McBride, Bob Lawson, Mel Nichol,
Ted Pawsey, Dud Sawyer, Arthur
Pawsey, Gordon Bullymore, Raymond Ayres and Gordon Jackson. Some of the others returning to the parental roof were Max Phillips, Ellen Pawsey, Lorna Nelson and Rance, Mrs.
E. Ovens (nee Wilms Grove) with infant daughter, and Maurice Witherell and family.

Bob McKay was taken very ill with pleurisy on Christmas Day, and when his condition showed no improvement by Sunday last, he was removed to Provincial hospital. Mrs. McKay accompanied Bob and is remaining there with Bob's parents for the time being.

St. Mary's Church (Ang.) was filled for the annual Carol Service on Sunday, December 21st, and both services on Christmas Day were quite well attended. All who can possibly do so, are requested to attend the Service of Special Prayer on January 1st, which will be held in every church throughout the U.S.A., and the British Empire, by an urgent appeal of those two wonderful men,
F. D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill.

Jimmy Gilmour, eldest son of banker Gilmour, showed little sign of improvement after his return from Wainwright hospital recently, so he was taken to a child specialist in Edmonton. The unfortunate lad is to spend the next three months in bed as a precautionary measure, to ward off serious complications.

A local light delivery truck and a visiting car collided at the P.O. corner on Christmas Eve about 4:30 p.m. Fortunately nobody was hurt, and the truck suffered only minor damage. The car did not escape so lightly, but the owner admitted that he was entirely to blame, by being on the wrong side of the road, and he assumed full responsibility for necessary repairs to both vehicles.

Curling is now in full swing, and already we hear whispers of a bigger and better 'spiel' in the near future.

Great excitement reigned in the village late Sunday when it was disclosed that all the boys on leave from Nova Scotia have been granted four extra days. This was the result of a telegram sent by Mayor A. E. Ripley to the 'powers that be', so now, all concerned are happy, and they will be able to take in New Year's Eve—and Day—festivities, which they would have missed, if the Mayor's appeal had proved futile. Thanks!
Your Worship.

PART EIGHT

"Well, well, well!" Larry looked up as Marion returned just as he had finished the cryptic dossier. "The only thing your chief left out in the part about her 'sympathy in back' performance, and any references to her passion for marriage."

"They must be recent," Marion announced without a moment's hesitation. "I shouldn't be at all surprised if she used to pluck her eyebrows before her run-in with Uncle Sam. She evidently returned in the States, though after her deportation in 1940, so she would undoubtedly adopt some changes in her personal appearance and in the billing of her performance. Being a woman who wanted to alter her previous professional appearance as naturally as possible she would allow her eyebrows to grow if she'd been in the habit of plucking them, or vice versa. If she had never plucked them before, she would also adopt some outstanding peculiarity such as wearing prominent earrings or other distinctive jewelry—in her case the earrings are a logical choice—and if she was formerly addicted to bright colors, she would be likely to adopt some contrasting scheme of ensemble and also alter her style of hairdressing rather radically. You'd be astonished what a difference such insignificant changes will make in a woman's general appearance."

"I guess you're right, at that. It's the little changes which make it difficult to spot a person, or alter them almost beyond recognition," Larry agreed, striving to visualize in his mind just what a difference the alterations enumerated by Miss Cameron would have in their quarry's likeness.

"In the case of this Ahlers—or Kongs—or von Lutz person," the girl continued, "he formerly dressed in bright colors—which, being a Mexican she undoubtedly did—to adopt the scheme of wearing black is a clever artifice. By letting her eyebrows grow in—for it's a thousand to one she plucked them before, especially in her profession—altering her style of hairdressing and adopting the habit of wearing prominent earrings, such as those green jade articles; the transformation would be both effective and complete, excepting in the case of very old friends who knew her personally over a long period of time. There is one thing which will settle it!" she announced with a decisive reach for a telephone blank in the writing table.

"And that is?" the Sergeant watched her compose a wire with undisguised admiration for her analysis of the situation.

"That picture we have just received is a professional photograph taken for her set as the 'nymph in black'."

"We'll just send a wire to headquarters asking them to check with a department photograph asking them to check with a department photograph taken when she was deported, and see if her eyebrows were plucked at that time!"

"Good idea!" Larry commended her. And while we're waiting for the reply, let's go downstairs and see."

"I'm ready. We can dispatch this from the telephone office now. It's just around the corner from the hotel."

"What did I tell you!" Marion exclaimed later in the evening, trying very hard—but not succeeding very well—to suppress an air of "I told you so!" after opening the answer to her wire and seeing it across to her companion.

"You were quite correct," the brief message read. "They were thinned in 1940."

WAS ISSUED BACK IN '45

PRINTED CHRISTMAS CARD

There is more humanity about the Victoria and Albert museum than its stiff brick exterior suggests.

The director sent me a Christmas Picture. He says we're in the London Star. It reveals the fact that the first Christmas card ever printed was issued only as recently as 1843.

The card, which was printed for Sir Henry Cole, first director of the South Kensington museum, is reproduced along with many other efforts by artists to celebrate the nativity. They range from valiant ivory relief from Cologne to a modern woodcut by Eric Gill. It is strange to see how the artistic circle has turned full circle back to medieval austerity.

But I can't help liking the first Christmas card, which features, as the films say, a hearty meal. As the fat would say: "I like eating best."

Bobby—"Say, ma?" Mother—"What is it, my dear?" Bobby—"It's a good thing that the foot of a mountain don't have a stocking to hang up at Christmas time."

C.N.R. Joins Dom. Campaign re Talking

Montreal—The Canadian National Railways has taken steps to co-operate with the Department of National War Services in the campaign to warn the public against careless talk which might aid the enemy, according to an announcement made at headquarters of the National War Services.

Easily read cards have been prepared in eye-catching style and will be placed in every sleeping, parlor, and dining car and every coach operated throughout the Canadian National Railways system. The message, which is adapted from one of the posters issued by the Department of National Defence, is brief, and direct. "Warning," calls the notice. "Careless talk may help the enemy. Do not discuss: ship movements, defence plans, munitions factories, troop movements, aircraft facilities, aircraft production, supply stores. Go on your guard."

Wheat Stem Sawfly

No one can say that the dreaded insect named above did not do its best to reduce the Canadian wheat surplus in 1941. However, since its methods result in direct and sometimes severe losses to farmers, it should be fought with every weapon at our command.

Some farm pests can be defeated only by the efforts of professionally trained agricultural experts. Stem rust of wheat is a good example, because the farmer could do little but await the distribution of resistant varieties. Not so with the wheat stem sawfly. Methods of controlling this pest have been worked out by professional entomologists in co-operation with farmers. It remains now for farmers to adopt the recommended practices.

The "War-time Production Series" of pamphlets published by the Dominion Government has included some very useful literature. One of the best pamphlets in the series is one prepared by Dr. C. W. Farland and entitled "Control of Wheat Stem Sawfly in the Prairie Provinces." Any farmer who owns a sawfly should also own a copy of this leaflet. It is well and clearly written and the recommendations made are based on careful and extensive field observations.

All grain buyers or companies associated with the Agricultural Department of The North-West Line Elevators Association have received copies, and will be glad to lend them. Farmers may secure their own by writing to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. For further information on sawfly and other insects, apply to the Dominion Entomological Laboratories at Lethbridge, Saskatoon or Brandon.

This Department and sponsoring companies take this opportunity to wish all readers a Happy and Prosperous New Year.
